

Copyright

All the materials shown on this website or elsewhere are protected by copyright law. Everyday Refugees Foundation is the holder of the copyright of these materials. Reproduction or retransmission of the materials, in whole or in part, in any manner, without the prior written consent of Everyday Refugees Foundation, is a violation of copyright law. You may make a single copy of the materials available through this course for personal, noncommercial use. You must preserve any copyright or other notices contained in or associated with them. You may not distribute such copies to others, whether or not in electronic form, whether or not for a charge or other consideration, without prior written consent of Everyday Refugees Foundation.